

Wedding Insurance

What happens when your venue closes unexpectedly or one of your wedding suppliers lets you down?

In just four months, two wedding venues in our region have gone into liquidation leaving lots of Brides and Grooms having to start planning the day of their dreams all over again.

Its not just a venue closing that can give couples major headaches:

A wedding supplier not able to provide what you've ordered, extreme weather, sudden illness meaning that you need to postpone your wedding...

In other words, something happens which you really had hoped wouldn't.

Having to deal with your wedding being postponed or cancelled is one thing, dealing with all the extra costs that will be involved is quite another. One wedding is expensive enough, but the cost of two doesn't bear thinking about.

Wedding insurance helps reduce the risk of you suddenly having to find the money to organise a whole new dream day.

If you're not sure whether you need wedding insurance, would you have difficulty in finding the money to replace your wedding cake, the groom's outfit, your wedding dress, your DJ, wedding toastmaster or even your wedding venue? If the answer is yes to any one of these and especially if the answer is yes to all, then you need to consider wedding insurance!

There are a wide range of wedding insurance policies available offering a wide range of cover. The cost of the cover varies and so it's worth shopping around to get the best deal for the cover you need.

Wedding insurance policies are priced to reflect the amount of cover you want. Starting from around £30, some would say that wedding insurance is an affordable necessity to keep the stress out of paying for your wedding.

Like most insurance that are offered (e.g. car or house), there's always a comparison site to visit to help you make your decision of who to go with. Other couples' experiences of wedding insurance cover, particularly if they've been unlucky and had to claim will also help you to decide which wedding insurance company to use, so do look at reviews. Having to make a claim, means that you will be going through an upsetting time so you will want a company who responds quickly and sympathetically to you.

Whilst it may be something you hope you will never need, giving you peace of mind, reducing your stress and if you have to make a claim, money well spent.
